Connexions module: m11594

Los Amigos Jungle Cucumbers - Figure 11*

John Janovec

This work is produced by The Connexions Project and licensed under the Creative Commons Attribution License †

1 Los Amigos Jungle Cucumbers: A Study of Five Sympatric Gurania Species

Amanda K. Neill
The New York Botanical Garden

Table 1

Figure 11 Female inflorescences of Gurania insolita take different forms, depending on the age of the stem that produced them. Old leafless woody stems produce cauliflorous inflorescences, with tightly-packed flowers,

^{*}Version 1.2: Aug 14, 2003 5:01 pm -0500

[†]http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/1.0

Connexions module: m11594 2

on a short peduncle. The photo on the right shows a longer, more flexible inflorescence that was produced by a young leafy stem. These inflorescences have leafy bracts with a red tint. The fruits in this species have bold white stripes and spots.

Previous | Next Photos by John Janovec